Ďurčik V. The interaction of society and nature – the philosophical and ethical aspects

The man has changed and will be changing the nature. However, it is not possible without the ethical understanding of interaction of the society and the nature. Different ways of searching new chances in global problems solving are shown in the works of those authors who bring more or less summarising perspective of a systemic view of the world. Contribution to this striving should be made by a new conception of mankind, its entirety, fellowship, despite diversity of human societies as well as diversity of human individuals.

Key words: philosophic and ethical aspects, relations a man to the nature, humanisation, justice and responsibility, the sustainability of life
